GUIDE TO IMPROVING YOUR HOME Studio Acoustics

Not all studios are created equal.

- Anyone can buy some budget monitors and mixers, but the quality of the room can make the difference between a decent recording studio and a professional one.
- Not what separates the wheat from the chaff is the quality of the room. The room is the most important factor in the quality of the recording.
- Use the following tips to improve your home recording studio.

Accuracy VS Soundproofing

There are two main factors that you need to control to achieve good acoustics in home studios:

- Accuracy: What is a good mix in the accuracy of sound reaching your ears. The main factors affecting the accuracy of sound in your studio include bass traps, soundproofing, isolation and monitor setup.
- Soundproofing: Soundproofing refers to the reduction of the transmission of sound pressure from one room to another. It is the ability of your room from adjacent spaces. Your job is to use soundproofing and you will benefit from it. It is the ability to isolate your studio from the rest of the house.

Trap The Bass

Small / medium sized rooms are always going to suffer from uneven frequency responses - creating problems with the low end of things.

By trapping bass in your studio, the overall sound and those of your mixes will be that much better.

- Light bass traps in your back - trap the corners of your room. This is the best place to start and will do most work.
- Use the 1/4 of trap bass traps for your front corners. Use the same for the back corners. Use the 1/4 of trap bass traps for your front corners. Use the same for the back corners. Use the 1/4 of trap bass traps for your front corners. Use the same for the back corners.
- Use bass traps in your back - trap the corners of your room. This is the best place to start and will do most work.

Kill The Reflections

Reducing side and rear reflections is the next step that you need to take.

- Don't have monitors too close to your ears. Stand in the middle of the room and close your eyes. Can you hear your monitors? If so, they're too close.
- The first reflections you must tackle are primary reflections. These reflections are produced by the sound energy that strikes the wall after leaving your speakers.
- If you have your monitors correctly set up then you can try to reduce primary reflections by using side wall absorbers. Place them at the right angle to the wall to the right and left of your mixing position.
- Make the absorbers wide enough to cover the width of the wall between you and the monitors. This will reduce the reflections.
- Place an additional absorber above your head in the mixing position. This will tackle reflections caused by a low ceiling.

Quick Tip no.1:

Use a spectrum analyzer to measure your room's frequency and highlight trouble spots to avoid.

Quick Tip no.2:

Use a spectrum analyzer to measure your room's frequency and highlight trouble spots to avoid.

Monitor Set-up & Mixing Position Are Key

Speakers

- For best stereo imaging, a common practice is to create an equilateral triangle using the two speakers and your mixing position as the points of the triangle. Make sure the speakers are angled in to face you and not facing parallel to your walls. This will help your ears hear a direct sound from the monitors without the room walls.
- Speakers should be facing the right way up and placed on their own dedicated stands and positioned at your head height.
- If you have to place the speakers on your work station, then use isolation stands to decouple the speakers from the desk and reduce reflections from the work surface.

Avoid Room Modes

- Each room has its own resonant frequencies or modes. The key to setting up your workstation, listening position and monitors is to avoid frequencies and harmonics which tend to build up in certain spots in the room. Avoid placing yourself in the center of the room, specifically avoiding middle points between front and back walls and the floor and the ceiling.
- A common practice in a standard rectangular room is to place your listening position 2/3 of the distance of the room away from the front wall. Use this as an indicator and not a gospel - just avoid middle points such as 1/3, 2/3 or 3/4 of the room's length.
- However, for a balanced stereo image, position yourself centered between the side walls.
- To prevent additional side wall reflections, place your speakers along the longest walls in a rectangular room.
- Try to avoid putting the monitor too far to the corners of the room. Move back from the speakers can reflect off walls behind the speakers, increasing the distance between the speakers and the walls they are facing away from is a good practice. So is adding absorption to these walls.
- Use a spectrum analyzer to measure your room's frequency and highlight trouble spots to avoid.

Soundproofing

Soundproofing your room is no easy task and can quickly become expensive.

Most DIY studios won't have the budget to build a proper soundproofed room, but you can still make significant improvements at low cost.

- Unfortunately, to achieve significant soundproofing in your standard room you need to have the scope to undertake some form of construction. If you have the opportunity, removing existing plasterboard, adding insulation, decoupling frameworks from the plasterboard and then adding a secondary wall on top of this treatment will give you a good level of soundproofing in your room.

Mass - The First Line Of Defense

Mass density is the single most important factor to sound attenuation. The more mass you add to a wall, the more sound it will block. For most home building, adding mass will be made of a lightweight, cheap building material that will have plenty of mass.

- If you have the skills to build an additional wall, then you can build a secondary wall with insulation and plasterboard and then filling the wall with insulation.
- Adding two or more layers of plasterboard is best to build a decent amount of mass.

Seal The Gaps

A soundproofed room is an airtight one. The best seal you can get is a door and window.

Door

Your standard door will provide around 25dB of insulation - not enough for a studio.

- Replace your standard door with a solid timber door (Use an 18mm or 22mm of solid timber) or a door with mass loaded vinyl.
- A solid door is useless if it has gaps around it. Buy an inexpensive door seal to help with sound leakage.
- If you have a double door, then it is a complete waste of money to seal the door shut against the frame.

For those who don't

- Use a heavy door with a solid timber core. Use a heavy door with a solid timber core.
- Use a heavy door with a solid timber core. Use a heavy door with a solid timber core.
- Use a heavy door with a solid timber core. Use a heavy door with a solid timber core.

Quick Tip:

We invented the category. With QuietComfort 35 headphones, there's no noise to get in the way of your music, and no wires to get in your way at all. We put years of research into headphones that deliver true listening freedom. Easily connect your devices with Bluetooth or NFC pairing. They provide balanced audio performance no matter how noisy your commute is, and clear calls even on a bustling, windy street. With 20 hours of wireless battery life, you can listen all day; and the fit is light and comfortable enough for it, too. And for easy management of your devices, use the free Bose Connect app. Better quiet, better sound and better for your music. And voice prompts to guide you through it so you'll never have to reach for your device. Even when you have to turn it up on a plane, the sound stays true to your music. Or, with the included backup audio cable, you can plug in and get 40 hours. Not anymore—a noise-rejecting dual-microphone system makes your calls clear from both ends. Da Bunkster 1.0 out of 5 stars I ignored the MANY complaints surround the power switch and went ahead and bought the haedphones because I love Bose. It has been roughly 15 months ago and now they turn themselves on nonstop without any interaction from me and they cannot hold a charge. I've had to unpair the headphones from all my Bluetooth devices because they keep turning themselves on and connecting without me knowing see photo. Nothing like getting a phone call and can't hear the person on the other line because the headphones magically turned on by themselves and connected to your phone. Sorry, but for what I paid, I expect more and this. Pretty sure this is the last pair of Bose I'll own, too many competitors. YES! I've updated the firmware to the latest version. YES! I've attempted the reset instructions that Bose has suggested. However, in Jan 2018, the power button began glitching. With the button switched off, the device will turn on by itself in front of my eyes and pair with my phone.

It will stay paired until it sleeps and then turn on to pair again this cycle continues until the QC35 battery is drained. The issue is easily reproducible when connecting to any device a PC, Mac or iPhone. I can hear the QC35 turn on, state its battery life and auto pair in the middle of the night. I emailed Bose to get service options. Was the firmware updated Yes. Did I do a reset Yes. Have I taken delicate care of my product. Yes these were babied and used exclusively indoors. But the problem still persisted into May 2018. A quick Google search and looking at Amazon reviews show this is a frequent issue among users. So I called Bose and asked for a replacement due to this common defect. I ultimately refused their service because I no longer have confidence in their quality. This will be the LAST Bose product I will buy. I also own the QC25 which had its right earpiece fail a year after purchase this was also a common issue with reports all over the internet. I'm disappointed in Bose and can no longer recommend them to you or my family and friends due to this history of poor quality. I've included a workaround for broken Bluetooth Pairing Feature. While I like the product overall, the customer service that one gets for what I consider a major purchase is left wanting. After my contact with Customer Support, I was asked to complete a survey not that it could actually be submitted see below. When this happened, I actually double checked that I had contacted the correct Bose support phone number as I thought I had perhaps stumbled into a scam. 4. I was told by the representative the amount that I would be charged for shipping. When the first email was received, I was actually charged more. So not only was I required to give my credit card number, and get charged for shipping a defective product, I was not even given the correct charge. Did I stumble into a scam after all 5.

The support emails that were sent had dead image links making it look even more like a scam and were in two parts. That information should have been clear and at the beginning of the email. The second email, the one that actually had the shipping label, did not mention at all that a Return number was needed. It simply had instructions for attaching the shipping label. This is yet another charge to insure a product that no longer even works properly. I want to make clear that, based upon this experience, I will actively discourage others from buying a Bose product until the problems outlined above have been addressed. Attempts to try and resubmit simply result in the same error. Their survey tool is broken. To be clear, the Bose Community Support site has multiple posts seeming to indicate that the latest Firmware update breaks the functionality of the bluetooth pairing feature. I will be attempting to return the headphones today. Customer support indicated that after the headphones are received, it can take 10 days to verify the receipt, several more days to process, and then another week or two for shipping the replacement. Approximately 36 weeks from the sound of it. I carefully took pictures to show how I shipped the item back, including the RMA on 3 surfaces of the outside of the box as well as another copy inside the plastic bag that contain the headphones. And, of course, the shipping label for which I had to pay. I'll try to update how long it takes and if any further difficulties are experienced. I was using beats up to now, which were very good but I write for a living and needed something to tone down the distractions of the outside world. These are brilliant, well worth the expense. They're so comfortable you wouldn't know you were wearing them. The sound is crisp and clear and better than my beats, which was a nice surprise. I love over the ear headphones, they're so much more comfortable to wear than the ones that rest on your ear.

These swivel and move to suit, are light but well made and so easy to connect and use. You can download the Bose app from the app store or just connect via Bluetooth. If you use headphones a lot like me then I recommend treating yourself to a pair of these. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Je navais pas lu les reviews avant sur le net grosse erreur, jy reviendrai. Recu le 20 Juillet 2018 Au deballage pas de surprise, je le mets sur la tete sans musique et 1er effet je ne mentends meme pas parler. Mon fils sen sert ensuite pour ecouter de la musique. Le lendemain, jinstalle le soft pour voir si il y a une mise a jour, il la trouve et linstalle. Le casque etait en version 1.xx et il me trouve une version 2.xx. Je me dis bon plan, ca va etre encore mieux. Grosse erreur! Des la maj finie, je retente lexperience et la je mentends parler, meme si il ya desormais plusieurs niveaux dattenuation via software. Mais meme a fond cest tres en dessous de la version originale. Donc grosse deception. Surtout quapres de nombreuses recherches jai vu que le probleme est bien connu et nie par Bose donc si vous avez la chance de recevoir un casque en version originale 1.xx qui attene tres fort SURTOUT ne lupgradez pas, il ny a pas de retour en arriere. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again I work in an open office environment and using these are a delight to remove almost all background noise and makes you feel like you locked in a little quiet bubble. I don't have a bad thing to say about these the battery lasts ages and charges quickly just 15mins charge will give you 2.5hrs use. The headphones come with a charging lead, dual phono adapter for using on flights and also a single jack lead to use in the event of total battery failure you can still use and listen to music just without the noise cancelling NC functionality.
